Huawei finance, operations remain

BY AARON RONQUILLO

HE workforce, financials and business operation of multinational technology firm Huawei Technologies Co. Ltd. remained stable despite all the trials it has faced, according to the company's senior officials.

Speaking at Huawei's annual report press conference on Monday, Meng Wanzhou, Huawei chief financial officer, said that despite a decline in revenue, the company's net profit hit a record high and the company maintained a sound financial position, enabling it to continue to make future-oriented investments and cope with uncertainties.

Meng said Huawei's total revenue of 2021 amounted to CNY636.8 billion ($99.9 billion) and its overall performance was in line with forecasts.

In terms of profit, it posted CNY113.7 billion ($17.8 billion), up 75.9 percent year on year, hitting a record high.

"Even if gains from asset disposal are excluded, the company's main business still saw a year-on-year increase in net profit margin. This is mainly attributed to improved product portfolios and more efficient internal operations that were made possible by management transformations and digitalization efforts," she added.

On the side of business operations, Guo Ping, Huawei's rotating chairman and deputy chairman of the board, said the company maintained heavy investment in research and development (R&D) despite the economic blacklisting and Covid-19 pandemic.

Guo said despite the setbacks, the company ranked second in the 2021 EU Industrial R&D Investment Scoreboard. Over 700 cities and 267 Fortune Global 500 companies worldwide have chosen Huawei as their partner for digital transformation.

Jun Zhang, director of Huawei Asia-Pacific Public Relations Department, said during an interview with reporters that despite such severe restrictions, Huawei's main business in information and communications technology (ICT) infrastructure has remained stable while new business segments like digital power and cloud grew rapidly. Furthermore, its ecosystem development efforts have entered the fast lane.

Besides developing technology, Huawei has kept itself occupied with corporate social responsibility, providing support to education.

Seeds for the Future is Huawei's global corporate social responsibility flagship program. The program seeks to develop local ICT talent, enhance knowledge transfer, help participants better understand the ICT sector and stimulate their interest in it, and promote and encourage participation in building a digital community.

Daniel Guo, chief operating officer of Huawei Philippines, said Seeds for the Future has been in the Philippines for seven years. More than 200 students have joined the program, some of them working for Huawei after graduating.

Huawei has also partnered with 60 Philippine universities and established ICT academies with over 9,000 students joining the program. Last year, Huawei also launched its Huawei Certified ICT Expert 100 project in the country.

Guo Ping said Huawei's ability to "survive and thrive" depends on ongoing investment in development. "Our fight to survive is not over yet," Guo said. "No matter what comes our way, we will keep investing. That is the only way forward."

with the continued surge in nickel prices, which has allowed us to grow our top and bottom line despite having experienced relatively bad weather conditions throughout last year's mining season," he

vessels of nickel ore for a total of 4.887 million wet metric tons (WMT), a 13.1-percent decrease from 2020's shipment of 103 vessels or 5.625 million WMT, mainly due to bad weather conditions during the year. The resulting product mix was 77 percent (3.761 million WMT) low-grade ore and 23 percent (1.126 million WMT) medium-grade ore in 2021 versus last year's mix of 68 percent (3.831 million WMT) low-grade ore and 32 percent (1.794 million WMT) mediumgrade ore.
